

Shelton Goode

Manager, Diversity Action Organization • Georgia Power

Dr. Shelton Goode is the Diversity Manager for Georgia Power Company and is responsible for implementing the company's diversity and inclusion strategy. As a human resource management professional with over 20 year experience, Goode has successfully helped Georgia Power integrate diversity and inclusion into its core business strategy. Prior to joining Georgia Power, he held executive HR positions in both the private and public sectors. His combined experiences and life-long achievements have earned him the reputation as a strategic, yet results-oriented leader who is recognized as an expert in the fields of Human Resources, Education Administration, Diversity Management, Leadership Development and Talent Management.

Goode is a member of the Conference Board's Diversity and Inclusion Leadership Council, Atlanta Compliance and Ethics Roundtable, National Association of African Americans in Human Resources, Affinity International Management Board of Advisors, and Society for Human Resource Management. He is the chair of the Troy University MPA Board of Advisors and founder of My ABD Network, a non-profit organization dedicated to helping students succeed in doctoral education programs.

As an Adjunct Professor at Troy University, Goode has taught graduate students in school's Masters in Public Administration (MPA) program. He often speaks at national forums and conference on topics such as Diversity Management and Business Ethics. He has also published articles on these topics in several magazines and scholarly journals.

Goode received his Bachelors degree from Southwest Texas State University and his Masters degree in Human Resource Management from Troy University. He obtained his Doctorate in Public Administration from the University of Alabama.
